“ To the Pauling Family:

If there's one thing I learned about grief. It's that it always surprises me. Disappearing one minute, returning with a vengeance another. Sometimes it surfaces in tears, other in anger and apologies, I don't understand... The smallest trigger, a similar laugh, a song, a place you drive by... and in a instant, it feels like you are flung into a time machine transported back to that moment when the time stood still, and they were standing next to you.
